

Homework

Do question 3 in chapter 4 of the text book, but for branch v1, use a branch length of 0.1. Use 0.2 for all the other branch lengths.

What are the likelihood and log likelihood of the data given this tree and set of branch lengths?

Is this tree a better or worse estimate than the tree with all branches set to 0.2?